WISCONSIN RAPIDS DAILY TRIBUNE

EIGHTH YEAR—NO. 2678. WISCONSIN RAPIDS, WIS., SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1922. PRICE THREE CENTS

REPORT THIRTEEN DEAD IN TEXAS STORM

CLOSE CONTESTS ARE FEATURE OF SCOUT JAMBOREE

WISCONSIN RAPIDS TROOP NO. 2 WINS; FIVE OUT OF TOWN TROOPS MAKE STRONG SHOWING

Wisconsin Rapids troop No. 2, with a total of 1,186 points out of a possible 1,500, took first place in the Scout Jamboree at the amusement hall last night. Nekoosa troop No. 2 took second place with 967, and Wisconsin Rapids No. 5 third with 572.

Every event was closely contested, and in many cases the judges had a real problem in determining who the winners were. In the first event of the evening, the Paul Revere race, the finals were so close that the four first teams had to run the event over again before the winner could be determined. The Civic Bee in which boys from each troop were asked questions on local and national government finally simmered down to a contest between the representatives of troops No. 2 of Wisconsin Rapids and Nekoosa. The list of questions was finally exhausted and the event was called a tie, each troop being awarded 200 points.

Out of Town Troops Strong

Scout Executive E. H. Justice expressed himself as being particularly well pleased with the strong showings made by the troops from neighboring villages. Nekoosa troop No. 2, with three firsts and points in all but two events did especially well, while the other troops from Port Edwards and Nekoosa also made good records. The Rudolph troop with a first, two seconds and a third was considered to have made an exceptional showing in view of the fact that this troop did not have the opportunities of practice for the events afforded the other troops.

The winning troop, Wisconsin Rapids No. 2 took points in every event, and its victory was due rather to all around proficiency than to exceptional ability in any particular group of events.

Many Parents Attend

A large number of parents and friends of the boys in the various troops were present, and the cheering became so spirited at times that the judges had to call for silence to make thei rdecisions known.

The Jamboree was a revelation to many of the men and women in attendance, for whom it was the first actual demonstration of the real educational and character developing value of the scout movement. The Civic Bee in particular brought many expressions of surprise as the boys answered questions that would have stumped many of their elders.

High School Band Plays

The Lincoln high school band, under the direction of E. A. Lambert, played between the events. The band has only been organized since last October and performed very creditably at its first public appearance.

Following are the results of the Jamboree, by troops:

Nekoosa No. 2	967
Wisconsin Rapids No. 5	572
Wisconsin Rapids No. 4	464
Rudolph No. 1	313

He will make his permanent residence in Healdsburg and will not return to this city.

Mr. Anderson still retains his interest in the Jensen & Anderson firm and will be represented by his brother, Will Anderson, who is in the local garage.

It is believed ousted heads of the currency factory in Washington can get jobs in Russia.

Park Fund Drive Will Open Here Late This Month

Reports from other cities in the state where the drive is already under way indicate that rapid progress is being made, and those behind the movement are confident that no difficulty will be experienced in raising the money needed.

La Crosse and Sheboygan are already in the midst of their local work. Eau Claire will begin Monday, and the campaign committee there has already received many pledges.

At Hayward the people are reported to be enthusiastically behind the movement, and the Hayward Rod and Gun club, which has voted to take charge of the campaign there, has pledged $2,000 and intends to make a representation equal to that of any community in the northern part of the state.

TWO FOOT RISE EXPECTED HERE IN NEAR FUTURE

REPORTS FROM UP RIVER CITIES INDICATE THAT HIGH WATER WILL STRIKE WISCONSIN RAPIDS SOON

Reports from cities further north on the Wisconsin river indicate that a rise in the river level of anywhere from a foot to two feet or possibly more may be expected here within the next twenty-four or forty-eight hours.

A rise of two feet was reported at Knowlton today and similar reports came from other cities all the way between Stevens Point and Merrill. The woods to the north are still full of snow, and the rains and warm weather of the last few days has caused it to melt rapidly.

No particular danger is anticipated from the high water here, other than the damage to flooded cellars. The Consolidated is removing additional flash boards from the dam, but no other preparations for the high water are regarded as necessary.

No Dams Out

Rumors that the dams at Merrill and Tomahawk have gone out which have been circulated here yesterday and today are officially reported to be without foundation. Officials of the local Consolidated mill, who are keeping in touch with the river situation state that they have received no report of any break of any importance. It is explained that rumors of the sort may arise from gates breaking or flashboards being carried away, but that dams of the type used in the Wisconsin river are so constructed that the whole dam never gives way.

Deny Name Of Christ Censored From Prayer

Washington, April 8—Charges of a "censorship" resulting in the omission of the name of Christ from the opening prayer of the arms conference were denied today by Secretary Hughes.

Taking his first notice of the charges, which were repeated several times on the Senate floor during th debate of the four power treaty, Mr. Hughes wrote to Representative Fess, republican of Ohio, that the Japanese knew nothing of the omission and that "of course no censorship was exercised."

Election Candidates File Campaign Expense Reports

Today is the last day for candidates at the recent municipal election to file statements of their campaign expenditures. The campaign was economically conducted on all sides, and with a majority of the reports in the hands of City Clerk, F. G. Gilkey this noon, it was apparent that none of the candidates had approached the limit on expenditures fixed by law.

The heaviest expenditure was by O. R. Roenius, mayor elect, whose total campaign costs werea $142.07. C. A. Dixon, the new treasurer, spent $8.65; and E. N. Pomainville, victorious candidate for Justice of the Peace spent $12.30. The expenses for aldermanic candidates were all under $5.00, and many spent nothing at all. Following are the statements of expenses as filed up to noon today—

O. R. Roenius, $142.07; Clark Lyon, $24.90; Joe Norton, $5.95; F. H. Jackson, $9.10; C. A. Dixon, $8.65; W. S. Gardner, $25.90; E. N. Pomainville, $12.30; Lacy Horton, $4.10; S. A. Rintleman, $2.00; Jake Grain, $2.10; John Plenke, $2.10; Henry Yetter, $1.60; H. F. Gaulke, $7.70; J. R. Lynch, 0.00; and William Appel, 0.00.

Elms From Grant Farm Planted Near His Tomb

St. Louis, Mo.—Two American elm trees have been taken from the old Grant farm in St. Louis County for shipment to New York to be replanted near President Grant's tomb on Riverside Drive on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, April 27.

The American Forestry Association at Washington requested the trees from August Busch, present owner of the farm. The trees are about three and one-half inches in diameter and 15 and 20 feet high.

Ulysses S. Grant resided on the farm from 1853 to 1860 in a log cabin which still stands.

Grand Jury Investigates Bigamy Charge

Peggy Davis, left, "Follies" chorus girl, and Mrs. Ellen Curley McIntyre Grafton, stenographer of Youngstown, O., both claim Joseph Donald Grafton, son of a Pittsburg millionaire, as husband. Evidence has been placed before a New York grand jury.

State To Protest Further Increase In Freight Rates

Madison, Wis., April 8—Petition of railroads to take from the southeastern part of Wisconsin the reduction granted by the interstate commerce commission early in the year on hay and grain rates, will be opposed by L. E. Gettle, member of the Wisconsin railroad commission in a hearing before an examiner of the interest commerce commission, at Chicago, April 10.

The change, proposed by the carriers which would make the eastern line of the territory in which reductions were granted, a line from Milwaukee to Madison, via Watertown, then to Dodgeville via the Northwestern, to the state line via the Illinois Central, and the state line west to the Mississippi river, vitally affects Wisconsin agricultural interests, Mr. Gettle said.

Hits Whole State

"Not only will the rates made effective in the southern part of the state be increased to Illinois points, but the increase will undoubtedly throw out of line the ratio between the southern part of the state and northern Illinois to the northerly counties of Wisconsin.

"The present rate on corn from Watertown to Peoria, Ill. is 14 cents and will become 17 and one-half cents if the petition of the carriers is granted. Because the hay and grain order gave no interterritorial reductions, the rates from northern Wisconsin to Chicago will become the same as they were prior to January 1.

"During the past year a great amount of hay from the hay production territories of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Idaho has been shipped to central Wisconsin. While the proposal does not directly affect this movement, it will create violations of the long and short haul clause of the transportation act which will have to be ironed out, and the usual way of correcting this matter is the raising of the lower rates."

Mrs. Rachelle Marceau passed away at her home, 865 Wylie street yesterday evening at about 11:30 o'clock, as the result of a stroke of paralysis last Monday morning from which she never regained consciousness.

Mrs. Marceau, who before her marriage was Miss Rachelle Protteau, was born in Joliet, province of Quebec, December 12, 1848. She came with her parents to Centralia, now Wisconsin Rapids, in 1866, and the following year was united in marriage to Aimee Marceau. Her husband preceeded her in death five years ago.

Mrs. Marceau is survived by two sons, Aimee T. Marceau of Wausau, and Albert F. Marceau of Minneapolis, and four daughter, Mrs. A. J. Fox of Eau Claire, Mrs. W. H. Nugent of Wausau, Mrs. C. E. Haskell, of Elroy, and Miss Arthemese Marceau of Wisconsin Rapids. There is one brother living, George Marceau of Minneapolis. All of the relatives were here at the time of her death.

Funeral services will be held at S. S. Peter and Paul Catholic church at 9 o'clock Monday morning and will be conducted by Rev. Wm. Reding. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

T. B. Test Returns From Three More Towns Favorable

Petitions for the county wide tuberculosis tests were received today from three additional towns, the percentage of signers in each case running well over the required 60 per cent. The town of Hansen sent in petitions with 101 names out of a total of 158 cattle owners, and requested more petitions to carry on the work with. Forty-two names were received from the town of Dexter, out of a total of 70 cattle owners, and the town of Cary gave about the same proportion.

Additonal signatures are still being obtained in the towns that have already sent in their petitions, and many report that the final showing will come close to 100 per cent. In the village of Biron, which sent in its petitions yesterday, 30 of the 34 cattle owners signed.

Indemnities For All

R. A. Peterson, who is conducting the campaign to bring the tests to Wood county today emphasized the fact that indemnities are paid for all cattle that are found to have the disease. This applies to scrub cattle as well as to pure bred or grade stock. In fact the owners of such scrub stock who are considering turning to a better grade have everything to gain by making tests given in the near future. They are practically insured of the full indemnity for any diseased animals and run no risk of losing any high priced pure bred stock.

Missing Point Man Is Believed Lost In River

Stevens Point—Tim Mullranin, aged 62 and single, caretaker of the summer resort on Martin's island; is missing and is believed to have been drowned Thursday afternoon when he attempted to reach the mainland from the island. Mullranin's boat was found capsized and lodged among the trees on the island about 100 yards below the cottage which he occupied.

A party of friends and relatives dragged the waters around the island for several hours yesterday, but found no trace of the body. It is believed to be lodged somewhere on the island, which is covered by the swirling waters of the river which has completely overflower it. Because of the high stage of the river efforts to find the body were temporarily given up.

Rail Rate Cut Should Give Lower Coal Prices

Madison, April 8—Reduction in coal prices to Wisconsin consumers should result from the lower freight rates on soft and hard coal and coke ordered today by the railroad commission after investigations of charges of carriers of fuel, H. M. Trumbower, commissioner, said today.

The freight rate cuts vary in different sections of the state, depending on the proximity to the ports from which the coal is shipped, but in the most interior Wisconsin points are material and give the basis for lower fuel prices, according to Mr. Trumbower.

REPORTS FROM UP RIVER CITIES INDICATE THAT HIGH WATER WILL STRIKE WISCONSIN RAPIDS SOON

Reports from cities further north on the Wisconsin river indicate that a rise in the river level of anywhere from a foot to two feet or possibly more may be expected here within the next twenty-four or forty-eight hours.

A rise of two feet was reported at Knowlton today and similar reports come from other cities all the way between Stevens Point and Merrill. The woods to the north are still full of snow, and the rains and warm weather of the last few days has caused it to melt rapidly.

No particular danger is anticipated from the high water here, other than the damage to flooded cellars. The Consolidated is removing additional flash boards from the dam, but no other preparations for the high water are regarded as necessary.

No Dams Out

Rumors that the dams at Merril and Tomahawk have gone out which have been circulated here yesterday and today are officially reported to be without foundation. Officials of the local Consolidated mill, who are keeping in touch with the river situation state that they have received no report of any break of any importance. "Not only will the rates made effective in the southern part of the state be increased to Illinois points, but the increase will undoubtedly throw out of line the ratio between the southern part of the state and northern Illinois to the northerly counties of Wisconsin.

"The present rate on corn from Watertown to Peoria, Ill. is 14 cents and will become 17 and one-half cents if the petition of the carriers is granted. Because the hay and grain order gave no interterritorial reductions, the rates from northern Wisconsin to Chicago will become the same as they were prior to January 1.

"During the past year a great amount of hay from the hay production territories of Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Idaho has been shipped to central Wisconsin. While the proposal does not directly affect this movement, it will create violations of the long and short haul clause of the transportation act which will have to be ironed out, and the usual way of correcting this matter is the raising of the lower rates."

Daly Music Company Put New Booths In The Store

Two new booths for the demonstration of phonographs and records are being installed in the store of the Daly Music Co. on Grand Avenue. The main sales room is being enlarged to make possible the improvements.

OLD RESIDENT OF CITY DIED FRIDAY

Mrs. Rachelle Marceau passed away at her home, 865 Wylie street yesterday evening at about 11:30 o'clock, as the result of a stroke of paralysis last Monday morning from which she never regained consciousness.

Mrs. Marceau, who before her marriage was Miss Rachelle Proteau, was born in Joliet, province of Quebec, December 12, 1848. She came with her parents to Centralia, now Wisconsin Rapids, in 1860, and the following year was united in marriage to Aimee Marceau. Her husband preceeded her in death five years ago.

Family Here

Mrs. Marceau is survived by two sons, Aimee T. Marceau of Wausau, and Albert F. Marceau of Minneapolis, and four daughter, Mrs. A. J. Fox of Eau Claire, Mrs. W. H. Nugent of Wausau, Mrs. C. E. Haskell, of Elroy, and Miss Arthemese Marceau of Wisconsin Rapids. There is one brother living, George Marceau of Minneapolis. All of the relatives were here at the time of her death.

Funeral services will be held at S. S. Peter and Paul Catholic church at 9 o'clock Monday morning and will be conducted by Rev. Wm. Reding. Burial will be at Calvary cemetery.

Confirm Class Of Ten At Trinity Moravian Church

The following young people will receive the sacrament of Confirmation at the 10:30 o'clock services at the Trinity Moravian Church Sunday morning:

The services will be conducted by Rev. J. N Schoebert, pastor of the church.

TEAR DOWN MIXER

The large mixing plant that has been used by the C. R. Meyers Construction company in the construction of the bridge is being dismantled. A short section of sidewalk is the only concrete work remaining, and a small mixer will be used for this.

T. B. Test Returns From Three More Towns Favorable

Petitions for the county wide tuberculosis tests were received today from three additional towns, the percentage of signers in each case running well over the required 60 per cent. The town of Hansen sent in petitions with 101 names out of a total of 158 cattle owners, and requested more petitions to carry on the work with. Forty-two names were received from the town of Dexter, out of a total of 70 cattle owners, and the town of Cary gave about the same proportion.

Additonal signatures are still being obtained in the towns that have already sent in their petitions, and many report that the final showing will come close to 100 per cent. In the village of Biron, which sent in its petitions yesterday, 30 of the 34 cattle owners signed.

Indemnities For All

R. A. Peterson, who is conducting the campaign to bring the tests to Wood county today emphasized the fact that indemnities are paid for all cattle that are found to have the disease. This applies to scrub cattle as well as to pure bred or grade stock. In fact the owners of such scrub stock who are considering turning to a better grade have everything to gain by making tests given in the near future. They are practically insured of the full indemnity for any diseased animals and run no risk of losing any high priced pure bred stock.

Stevens Point—Tim Mullranin, aged 62 and single, caretaker of the summer resort on Martin's island; is missing and is believed to have been drowned Thursday afternoon when he attempted to reach the mainland from the island. Mullranin's boat was found capsized and lodged among the trees on the island about 100 yards below the cottage which he occupied.

A party of friends and relatives dragged the waters around the island for several hours yesterday, but found no trace of the body. It is believed to be lodged somewhere on the island, which is covered by the swirling waters of the river which has completely overflower it. Because of the high stage of the river efforts to find the body were temporarily given up.

SOUTHWEST HARD HIT; DAMAGE TO PROPERTY HEAVY

COMMUNICATIONS DESTROYED AND REPORTS ARE MEAGRE; ILLINOIS CITY THREATENED BY FLOODS

(By Associated Press)

Dallas, Texas, April 8—Deaths in the storm of early today numbered thirteen, according to reports from various north central Texas and south central Oklahoma points at one o'clock this afternoon. Early estimates of the property damage were that it would be heavy.

Six deaths were reported at Runnels county and four in Callahan county Texas. Reports from both places were meagre.

Report Woman Killed

Fort Worth, Texas, April 8—One woman was killed at Cisco, another seriously hurt and a dozen other persons slightly injured in a storm this morning, according to records from railroad offices.

A dozen houses were blown down, the Broadway Theater destroyed, plate glass blown out of business houses and many stores flooded.

Hits Oklahoma City

Lawton, Okla., April 8—One person, a Mrs. Sands, was killed and her baby probably fatally injured in a severe wind storm which swept the mountain hill division of Lawton at eight o'clock this morning. A number of others are reported injured and much property damage done.

In the down town section of Lawton, telephone and telegraph poles were blown down and windows and awnings were torn away throughout the city.

Floods Threaten

Beardstown, Ill., April 8—At nine o'clock this morning the water here had registered 22 feet 3 inches and was still rising. When it reaches the height set by St. Louis weather bureau observers for noon today, the Lost Creek levy will be abandoned, it was announced. A rise of three more inches, as predicted, will send a steady stream of water over the top.

Rail Rate Cut Should Give Lower Coal Prices

Madison, April 8—Reduction in coal prices to Wisconsin consumers should result from the lower freight rates on soft and hard coal and coke ordered today by the railroad commission after investigations of charges of carriers of fuel, H. M. Trumbower, commissioner, said today.

The freight rate cuts vary in different sections of the state, depending on the proximity to the ports from which the coal is shipped, but in the most interior Wisconsin points are material and give the basis for lower fuel prices, according to Mr. Trumbower.

Cost Of Farm Labor Will Be Much Cheaper This Year

Neenah—Farm labor, like farm products has dropped in price and it is said that farmers in this locality are hiring men for the coming season at from $26 to $40 a month depending upon the qualifications of the man. A year ago, it was said, farm labor prid from $50 to $75 and higher a month. Quite a number of farmers in this district already have hired their summer help.

KEEP IT UP BOYS

The Boy Scouts are to be congratulated upon the success of their Jamboree Friday night at the Armory. The spectator was interested in the manner in which all the troops represented conducted their various examinations and tests. The spirit of the boys was excellent.

If the boys will keep up the good work and strive hard to bring each and every troop up to a high standard of efficiency, the following jamborees will be all the most interesting for everyone.

Much of the success of the scout work here depends on the executive, Mr. Justice, however, the work of the Scoutmasters and the spirit among the boys is to be very highly commended. The scout movement here should be the biggest thing in the lives of the boys outside of their home, their church and their school. The jamboree last night was one of the many dividends of Scouting.

REGULATION NEEDED

Congress next year will undertake to formulate a national forestry policy to save a remnant of our disappearing timber supply. The move comes about a century late.

Private ownership is sacred in American thought. In many economic relations it makes for efficiency and service. But experience has taught that private ownership without regulation is not safe where large public interests are involved. The driver of an automobile may be the owner, but he is not permitted on that account to tear through safety zones at 40 miles an hour. It is recognized that the public have some rights that curtail the motorist's liberties.

Housing and home-owning are of vast importance to the welfare of the country as a whole and the lumber supply has a direct influence upon both. So it is not wholly a private matter that certain interests are slashing down the remaining trees, shipping the best lumber out of the country and making no provision for a future growth of forests. That is something in private ownership that needs regulating.

It is quite possible for congress to regulate the exportation of lumber: to encourage the importation of lumber rather than to thwart it by protective tariffs: to require proper methods of lumbering and replacement. This should be in the new policy.

"BETTER ROADS" A REALITY

The internal development of the country has slowed down, it is often said, no new railroads are being built, and surplus capital is going into other enterprises. This, it is explained, is why industry has turned its attention to foreign trade.

These industrial and [illegible] have overlooked a [illegible] that is today, and probably will be for many years, the greatest of all. The building of highways is referred to. Though there is now little construction of new rail line highway building is proceeding on an unprecedented scale and absorbing an enormous amount of capital. The internal development of the country goes on unchecked, but the taxpayers are the investors now, and their dividends are not calculated in percentage but in service.

About 1,000,000 men were employed in the construction of federal aid road last year—a greater number than were employed in the [illegible] industry or the automobile [illegible]. Road building is now one of the greatest of the national industries. Twenty-eight thousand miles of federal aid roads have been completed or work done on them during the present fiscal year.

This new industry will continue to flourish for many years, for there is not a section of the country, however well supplied with rail lines, that has all the improved highways that it needs.

Imports Of American Coal To Denmark Decline

Copenhagen—Imports of American coal into Denmark declined heavily last year and Great Britain again took the lead in Danish markets.

In 1920 the United States supplied about one-half of the 2,200,000 tons of coal Denmark imported but in 1921 that country supplied less than one-tenth of the total coal imports.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

In the summer of 1914,

MARK SABRE finds that he is estranged from human sympathy and understanding with the sole exception of

LADY NONA TYBAR, an old sweetheart, now unhappily married. Sabre's prosaic and snobbish wife,

MABEL, fails to understand her husband's poetic and whimsical temperament. In business he is undermined by jealous associates in the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre and a promised partnership is diverted from him to TWYNING. At this point, Nona's life with Tybar becomes intolerable and she asks Sabre to take her away. War is declared and Sabre rushes to secure a commission. He speaks to Colonel Rrattray of the Pinks.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Eh? Into what?"

"The war." It was easier after the plunge. "I see in the papers that civilians are being given commissions by recommendation. Can you get me a commission?"

Colonel Rattray showed surprise. "Well, I don't know. I might. I've no doubt I could, if you're eligible. How old are you Sabre?"

"Thirty-six."

Colonel Rattray said doubtfully, "Come on up to the Mess in the morning and I'll get our doctor to have a look at you. Then we'll see what can be done. All right, eh?"

III

He said nothing to Mabel of his intention. It was just precisely the sort of thing he could not possibly discuss with Mabel. Mabel would say, "Whyever should you?" and of all imaginable ordeals the idea of exposing before Mabel his feeling about England . . . he would tell her when it was done, if it came off.

And his thought was, when a few hours later he was walking slowly away from his interview with Major Earnshaw, the doctor at the barracks, "Thank God, I never said anything to Mabel about it."

Major Earnshaw had very pleasantly "had a go at this heart of yours." Withdrawn his stethoscope and shaken his head. It was "no go; absolutely none, Sabre."

"Well, but that's for a commission. I'll go into the ranks."

"You can't possibly go in as you are—now. The standards will probably be reduced, but they'll have to be reduced a goodish long way before you'll get in, I don't mind telling you."

IV

Then came another of the frightful undoings of his emotions.

The occasion was that of his meeting with Harkness outside the County Times office. Harkness was a captain of the battalion that had gone out who had been left behind owing to some illness. The British Expeditionary Force had been in action.

Sabre said, "News? Anything about the Pinks?"

Harkness nodded. He seemed to be swallowing. Then he said, "Yes, the regiment. Pretty bad."

Sabre said, "Any one—?" and also stopped.

Harkness looked, not at Sabre, but straight across the top of his head and began an appalling, and as it seemed to Sabre, an endless recitative. "The Colonel's killed. Bruce is killed. Otway's killed—"

"Otway . . ."

"Cottar's killed. Bullen's killed—"

Endless! The names struck Sabre like successive blows. Were they never going to end?

"Carmichael's killed. My young brother's—" his voice cracked—"killed. Sikes is killed."

"Sikes killed . . .And your brother . . ."

Harkness said in a very thin, squeaking voice, "Yes the regiment's pretty well— The regiment's —" He looked full at Sabre and said in a very loud, defiant voice, "I bet they were magnificent. By God, I bet you they were magnificent. Oh, my God, why the hell wasn't I there?" He turned abruptly and went away, walking rather funnily.

This was the moment at which there descended upon Sabre, never to leave him while he remained not "in it," the appalling sense of oppression that the war exercised upon him. On his brain like a weight; on his heart like a pressing hand.

And still events: still, and always, now, disturbing things.

While he stood there he was suddenly aware of Young Rod, Pole or Perch, rather breathlessly come up.

"I say, Sabre, have you heard this frightful news about the Pinks?— I want you to to talk to my mother. She'll listen to you. I'm going to enlist.

Sabre said, "Good Lord, are you, Perch? Must you? Your mother, why, what on earth will she do without you? She'll—"

Young Perch winced painfully. "I know. It pretty well kills me to think of it and I'm having the most frightful scenes with her. But I've thought it all out, Sabre, and I know I'm doing the right thing. This is, well, this is a chap's country, and I've figured it out it's got to come before my mother. It's got to. She says it will kill her if I go. I believe it will, Sabre.'

He rubbed a hand across his eyes and broke off. Never mind about that; you know lots of people. Well I want to get hold of some nice girl to live with my mother and take care of her in my place while I'm away. A sort of companion, aren't they called? I want someone who my mother will indignantly call a chit of a child"—he gave rather a broken little laugh—"can't I hear her saying it! I say Sabre, do for God's sake help me. Do you know anyone?"

This frightful war! Was it going to attack even that pathetic little old woman at Puncher's Farm with her fumbling hands and her frail existence centered solely in her son? He said, "I'm awfully sorry Perch. Frightfully sorry for your mother and for you. I'll help you all I can. It's a funny coincidence but I believe I do know just the very girl that would be what you want—"

Young Perch grasped his hand in delighted relief. "Oh, Sabre, if you do! I felt you would help."

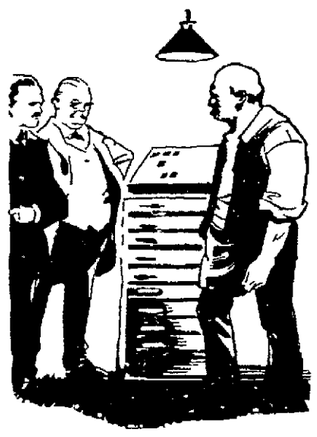
"The chance I'm thinking about I was hearing of only a few days ago. The works' foreman in my office, an old chap called Bright. He's got a daughter about eighteen or thereabouts, and I was hearing he wanted to get her into some kind of post like yours. I've spoken to her once or twice when she's been about the place for her father and I took a tremendous fancy to her. She's as pretty as a picture. Effie, she's called. I believe your mother would take to her no end. And she'd just love your mother."

VI

It was from Twyning that Sabre had heard that a post of some sort was being considered for Effie Bright. Her father, as he had told young Perch, was works' foreman at Fortune, East and Sabre's. "Mr. Bright." A massive old man with a massive rather striking face hewn beneath a bald dome and thickly grown all about and down the throat with stiff white hair. He was intensely religious and he had a deep-set and extraordinarily penetrating eyes that frequently denote the religious zealot.

Extraordinary that such a stern and hard old man should have for daughter such a fresh and lovable slip of a young thing as his Effie! Bright Effie, Sabre always called her, inverting her names. Mr. Bright had a little cupboard called his office at the foot of the main stairway and Bright Effie came often to see her father there. Sabre had spoken to her in the little cupboard or just outside it. He had delight in watching the most extraordinary shining that she had in her eyes.

It was like reading an entertaining book, he used to think, and he had the idea that humor of that rarest kind which is unbounded love mingled with unbounded sense of the oddities of life was packed to bursting within her.



"YES, BUT I'LL WANT REFERENCES MR. SABRE."

Some such apprehension of her Sabre had expressed to Twyning. Twyning had given a short laugh and said, "You seem to have been thinking a lot about the fair Effie!"

That kind of laugh and the kind of remark that Sabre hated and he gave a slight gesture which Twyning well knew meant that he hated it.

"What's old Bright going to do with her?"

"He doesn't quite know. He's an idea of getting her out as a sort of lady's companion somewhere.'

This was what Sabre had remembered; and he went straight from Young Perch to Twyning and recalled the conversation.

Twyning said, "Hullo, still interested in the fair Effie?"

"It's for young Perch over at Penny Green I'm asking. For his mother. "He's a young man"—Sabre permitted his eyes to rest for a moment on Harold, seated at his desk—"and he feels he ought to join the army. He wants a girl to be with his mother while he's away."

Twyning, noting the glance, changed his tone to one of much friendliness. "Oh, I see, old man. No, Effie's got nothing yet. She was over to our place to tea last Sunday."

"Good. I'll go and talk to old Bright. I'm keen about this."

"Yes, you seem to be old man."

Mr. Bright received the suggestion with a manner that irritated Sabre. While he was being told of the Perches he stared at Sabre with that penetrating gaze of his as though in the proposal he searched for some motive other than common friendliness. His first comment was, "They'll want references, I suppose, sir?"

Sabre smiled. "Oh, scarcely, Mr. Bright. Not when they know who you are."

The old man was standing before Sabre bending his head close towards him as theugh he would sense out ome hidden motive behind all this. He contracted his great brows as if to squeeze more penetration into his gaze. "Yes, but I'll want references. Mr. Sabre. She's not going here, there nor anywhere."

KEEP IT UP BOYS

The Boy Scouts are to be congratulated upon the success of their Jamboree Friday night at the Armory. The spectator was interested in the manner in which all the troops represented conducted their various examinations and tests. The spirit of the boys was excellent.

If the boys will keep up the good work and strive hard to bring each and every troop up to a high standard of efficiency, the following jamborees will be all the most interesting for everyone.

Much of the success of the scout work here depends on the executive, Mr. Justice, however, the work of the Scoutmasters and the spirit among the boys is to be very highly commended. The scout movement here should be the biggest thing in the lives of the boys outside of their home, their church and their school. The jamboree last night was one of the many dividends of Scouting.

REGULATION NEEDED

Congress next year will undertake to formulate a national forestry policy to save a remnant of our disappearing timber supply. The move comes about a century late.

Private ownership is sacred in American thought. In many economic relations it makes for efficiency and service. But experience has taught that private ownership without regulation is not safe where large public interests are involved. The driver of an automobile may be the owner, but he is not permitted on that account to tear through safety zones at 40 miles an hour. It is recognized that the public have some rights that curtail the motorist's liberties.

Housing and home-owning are of vast importance to the welfare of the country as a whole and the lumber supply has a direct influence upon both. So it is not wholly a private matter that certain interests are slashing down the remaining trees, shipping the best lumber out of the country and making no provision for a future growth of forests. That is something in private ownership that needs regulating.

It is quite possible for congress to regulate the exportation of lumber; to encourage the importation of lumber rather than to thwart it by protective tariffs; to require proper methods of lumbering and replacement. This should be in the new policy.

"BETTER ROADS" A REALITY

The internal development of the country has slowed down, it is often said, no new railroads are being built, and surplus capital is going into other enterprises. This, it is explained, is why industry has turned its attention to foreign trade.

These industrial and [illegible] seers have overlooked a [illegible] that is today, and probably will be for many years, the greatest of all. The building of highways is referred to. Though there is now little construction of new rail lines highway building is proceeding on an unprecedented scale and absorbing an enormous amount of capital. The internal development of the country goes on unchecked, but the taxpayers are the investors now, and their dividends are not calculated in percentage but in service.

About 1,000,000 men were employed in the construction of federal aid roads last year—a greater number than were employed in the steel industry or the automobile business. Road building is now one of the greatest of the national industries. Twenty-eight thousand miles of federal aid roads have been completed or work done on them during the present fiscal year.

This new industry will continue to flourish for many years, for there is not a section of the country, however well supplied with rail lines, that has all the improved highways that it needs.

Imports Of American Ceal To Denmark Decline

Copenhagen—Imports of American coal into Denmark declined heavily last year and Great Britain again took the lead in Danish markets.

In 1920 the United States supplied about one-half of the 2,200,000 tons of coal Denmark imported but in 1921 that country supplied less than one-tenth of the total coal imports.

How the Famous Disc Clutch of the Buick "Four" Proved Itself

The same design of disc clutch that was used in the powerful war tanks is likewise used in the Buick Four.

The Buick clutch under the most gruelling conditions, has proved itself absolutely positive, dependable, and easy to operate—a clutch that demonstrated the same certainty and safety for unforeseen emergency that it did for ordinary service.

This thoroughly trustworthy unit is a development of 20 years of consistent effort. It is typically representative of the standards governing the construction of the Buick Four throughout.

NO WONDER SHE WAS TAKEN FOR FILM STAR

A warm-hearted woman, passing along a street in Yos Angelesealittel along a street in Los Angeles recently, noticed three little girls gazing into a confectioner's window. With a customary impulse she drew a 25-cent piece from her purse and, tapping the largest of the three on the shoulder, said:

"Here, my dear, take this with my compliments and get your friends and yourself some candy."

Then suddenly, she stepped back a pace.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed, "how you resemble Shirley Mason, the motion picture star—about the same size and all."

"That's not strange," was the reply. "I am Shirley Mason."

The diminutive Shirley, as frequently, was passing an afternoon in the company of two children of her acquaintance. The dainty Fox star, by the way, is coming to the Palace Theatre on Monday in "Ever Since Eve."

Miss Gladys Smith, who attends the county normal here, is spending her Easter vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Smith at Plainfield.

What will you be at fifty?

On every side you see men in declining years, who are in sore need of those comforts which should be the portion of the aged. They spent their all regardless of the future.

Likewise, you find men who have passed the meridian of life, surrounded with every comfort. They were the ones who provided for the time when they could no longer rely upon their talents and strength for a steady income—when they were "too old for the job."

It rests with you

whether your old age will be passed in poverty and misery, or in comfort and happiness.

Assure yourself of a comfortable old age by taking out an insurance policy. It will be a ready friend when you are pressed for funds. It protects your dependents and your property if you should die. For a good all around savings proposition it can't be beat.

Insurance is a business here. Every advantage of this experience is at your disposal in selecting a policy to fit YOUR needs. Talk it over to-day.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

In the summer of 1914,

MARK SABRE finds that he is estranged from human sympathy and understanding with the sole exception of

LADY NONA TYBAR, an old sweetheart, now unhappily married. Sabre's prosaic and snobbish wife,

MABEL, fails to understand her husband's poetic and whimsical temperament. In business he is undermined by jealous associates in the firm of Fortune, East and Sabre and a promised partnership is diverted from him to TWYNING. At this point, Nona's life with Tybar becomes intolerable and she asks Sabre to take her away. War is declared and Sabre rushes to secure a commission. He speaks to Colonel Rrattray of the Pinks.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Eh? Into what?"

"The war." It was easier after the plunge. "I see in the papers that civilians are being given commissions by recommendation. Can you get me a commission?"

Colonel Rattray showed surprise. "Well, I don't know. I might. I've no doubt I could, if you're eligible. How old are you Sabre?"

"Thirty-six."

Colonel Rattray said doubtfully, "Come on up to the Mess in the morning and I'll get our doctor to have a look at you. Then we'll see what can be done. All right, eh?"

III

He said nothing to Mabel of his intention. It was just precisely the sort of thing he could not possibly discuss with Mabel. Mabel would say, "Whyever should you?" and of all imaginable ordeals the idea of exposing before Mabel his feeling about England . . . he would tell her when it was done, if it came off.

And his thought was, when a few hours later he was walking slowly away from his interview with Major Earnshaw, the doctor at the barracks, "Thank God, I never said anything to Mabel about it."

Major Earnshaw had very pleasantly "had a go at this heart of yours." Withdrawn his stethoscope and shaken his head. It was "no go; absolutely none, Sabre."

"Well, but that's for a commission. I'll go into the ranks."

"You can't possibly go in as you are—now. The standards will probably be reduced, but they'll have to be reduced a goodish long way before you'll get in, I don't mind telling you."

IV

Then came another of the frightful undoings of his emotions.

The occasion was that of his meeting with Harkness outside the County Times office. Harkness was a captain of the battalion that had gone out who had been left behind owing to some illness. The British Expeditionary Force had been in action.

Sabre said, "News? Anything about the Pinks?"

Harkness nodded. He seemed to be swallowing. Then he said, "Yes, the regiment. Pretty bad."

Sabre said, "Any one—?" and also stopped.

Harkness looked, not at Sabre, but straight across the top of his head and began an appalling, and as it seemed to Sabre, an endless recitative. "The Colonel's killed. Bruce is killed. Otway's killed—"

"Otway . . ."

"Cottar's killed. Bullen's killed—"

Endless! The names struck Sabre like successive blows. Were they never going to end?

"Sikes killed . . . And your brother . . ."

Harkness said in a very thin, squeaking voice, "Yes the regiment's pretty well— The regiment's —" He looked full at Sabre and said in a very loud, defiant voice, "I bet they were magnificent. By God, I bet you they were magnificent. Oh, my God, why the hell wasn't I there?" He turned abruptly and went away, walking rather funnily.

This was the moment at which there descended upon Sabre, never to leave him while he remained not "in it," the appalling sense of oppression that the war exercised upon him. On his brain like a weight; on his heart like a pressing hand.

And still events; still, and always, now, disturbing things.

While he stood there he was suddenly aware of Young Rod, Pole or Perch, rather breathlessly come up.

"I say, Sabre, have you heard this frightful news about the Pinks?— I want you to to talk to my mother. She'll listen to you. I'm going to enlist.

Sabre said, "Good Lord, are you, Perch? Must you? Your mother, why, what on earth will she do without you? She'll—"

Young Perch winced painfully. "I know. It pretty well kills me to think of it and I'm having the most frightful scenes with her. But I've thought it all out, Sabre, and I know I'm doing the right thing. This is, well, this is a chap's country, and I've figured it out it's got to come before my mother. It's got to. She says it will kill her if I go. I believe it will, Sabre.'

He rubbed a hand across his eyes and broke off. Never mind about that; you know lots of people. Well I want to get hold of some nice girl to live with my mother and take care of her in my place while I'm away. A sort of companion, aren't they called? I want someone who my mother will indignantly call a chit of a child"—he gave rather a broken little laugh—"can't I hear her saying it! I say Sabre, do for God's sake help me. Do you know anyone?"

This frightful war! Was it going to attack even that pathetic little old woman at Puncher's Farm with her fumbling hands and her frail existence centered solely in her son? He said, "I'm awfully sorry Perch. Frightfully sorry for your mother and for you. I'll help you all I can. It's a funny coincidence but I believe I do know just the very girl that would be what you want—"

Young Perch grasped his hand in delighted relief. "Oh, Sabre, if you do! I felt you would help."

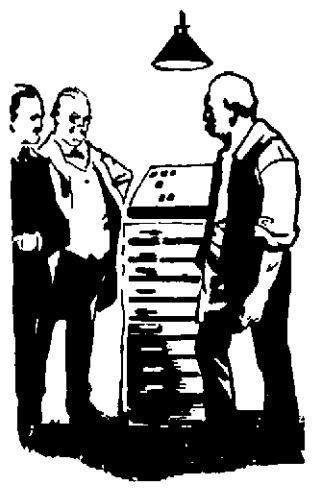
"The chance I'm thinking about I was hearing of only a few days ago. The works' foreman in my office, an old chap called Bright. He's got a daughter about eighteen or thereabouts, and I was hearing he wanted to get her into some kind of post like yours. I've spoken to her once or twice when she's been about the place for her father and I took a tremendous fancy to her. She's as pretty as a picture. Effie, she's called. I believe your mother would take to her no end. And she'd just love your mother."

VI

It was from Twyning that Sabre had heard that a post of some sort was being considered for Effie Bright. Her father, as he had told young Perch, was works' foreman at Fortune, East and Sabre's. "Mr. Bright." A massive old man with a massive rather striking face hewn beneath a bald dome and thickly grown all about and down the throat with stiff white hair. He was intensely religious and he had a deepset and extraordinarily penetrating eyes that frequently denote the religious zealot.

Extraordinary that such a stern and hard old man should have for daughter such a fresh and lovable slip of a young thing as his Effie! Bright Effie. Sabre always called her, inventing her names. Mr. Bright had a little cupboard called his office at the foot of the main stairway and Bright Effie came often to see her father there. Sabre had spoken to her in the little cupboard or just outside it. He had delight in watching the most extraordinary shining that she had in her eyes.

It was like reading an entertaining book, he used to think, and he had the idea that humor of that rarest kind which is unbounded love mingled with unbounded sense of the oddities of life was packed to bursting within her.



"YES, BUT I'LL WANT REFERENCES MR. SABRE."

Some such apprehension of her Sabre had expressed to Twyning. Twyning had given a short laugh and said, "You seem to have been thinking a lot about the fair Effie!"

That kind of laugh and the kind of remark that Sabre hated and he gave a slight gesture which Twyning well knew meant that he hated it.

"What's old Bright going to do with her?"

"He doesn't quite know. He's an idea of getting her out as a sort of lady's companion somewhere."

This was what Sabre had remembered; and he went straight from Young Perch to Twyning and recalled the conversation.

Twyning said, "Hullo, still interested in the fair Effie?"

"It's for young Perch over at Penny Green I'm asking. For his mother. "He's a young man"—Sabre permitted his eyes to rest for a moment on Harold, seated at his desk—"and he feels he ought to join the army. He wants a girl to be with his mother while he's away."

Twyning, noting the glance, changed his tone to one of much friendliness. "Oh, I see, old man. No, Effie's got nothing yet. She was over to our place to tea last Sunday."

"Good. I'll go and talk to old Bright. I'm keen about this."

"Yes, you seem to be old man."

Mr. Bright received the suggestion with a manner that irritated Sabre. While he was being told of the Perches he stared at Sabre with that penetrating gaze of his as though in the proposal he searched for some motive other than common friendliness. His first comment was, "They'll want references, I suppose, sir?"

Sabre smiled. "Oh, scarcely, Mr. Bright. Not when they know who you are."

The old man was standing before Sabre bending his head close towards him as though he would sense out some hidden motive behind all this. He contracted his great brows as if to squeeze more penetration into his gaze. "Yes, but I'll want references, Mr. Sabre. She's not going here, there nor anywhere."

Magna Charta Still Most Popular British Document

London—After 700 years, Magna Charta remains the most popular British manuscript. Last year 14,000 persons went to the British Museum to see it. Americans invariably ask to view the famous charter which insures Englishmen their rights, according to the museum custodians, but other foreigners take more interest in the Papal Bull which is displayed next to it.

Heavy green blinds are kept over the precious parchment to exclude the full light rays and thus prevent deterioration but are lifted to show the charter to admiring pilgrims.

Most persons are disappointed at [illegible] John's signature, according to an official at the museum, but they seem satisfied when they read the script that it was "given by our hand in the meadow which is called Renimede between Windlesor and Stanes, on the 15th day of June in the 17th year of our reign. (1215)."

NO WONDER SHE WAS TAKEN FOR FILM STAR

A warm-hearted woman, passing along a street in Yos Angelesealittel along a street in Los Angeles recently, noticed three little girls gazing into a confectioner's window. With a customary impulse she drew a 25-cent piece from her purse and, tapping the largest of the three on the shoulder, said:

"Here, my dear, take this with my compliments and get your friends and yourself some candy."

Then suddenly, she stepped back a pace.

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed, "how you resemble Shirley Mason, the motion picture star—about the same size and all."

"That's not strange," was the reply. "I am Shirley Mason."

The diminutive Shirley, as frequently, was passing an afternoon in the company of two children of her arquaintance. The dainty Fox star, by the way, is coming to the Palace Theatre on Monday in "Ever Since Eve."

Miss Gladys Smith, who attends the county normal here, is spending her Easter vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Smith at Plainfield.

What will you be at fifty?

On every side you see men in declining years, who are in sore need of those comforts which should be the portion of the aged. They spent their all regardless of the future.

Likewise, you find men who have passed the meridian of life, surrounded with every comfort. They were the ones who provided for the time when they could no longer rely upon their talents and strength for a steady income—when they were "too old for the job."

It rests with you

whether your old age will be passed in poverty and misery, or in comfort and happiness.

Assure yourself of a comfortable old age by taking out an insurance policy. It will be a ready friend when you are pressed for funds. It protects your dependents and your property if you should die. For a good all around savings proposition it can't be beat.

Insurance is a business here. Every advantage of this experience is at your disposal in selecting a policy to fit YOUR needs. Talk it over to-day.

Who's Who In Wisconsin Rapids

The Who's Who column will be run each Saturday in the Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune. It will include a brief sketch of the life of citizens who have helped make history for Wisconsin Rapids.

Edgar George Doudna

EDGAR GEORGE DOUDNA

One of the best known educators in the state of Wisconsin is Edgar George Doudna, superintendent of the city schools of Wisconsin Rapids.

Mr. Doudna was born in the village of Viola, September 21, 1878. When he was one year old, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wiliam F. Doudna moved from the little vilage of Viola to Richland Center, where they lived for a short time, and again changed their place of residence, moving on a farm near Richland Center.

When of sufficient age, Mr. Doudna attended the country school where he studied until sixteen years of age. Shortly after leaving school, he began his first school work, teaching for three years in the country schools of Richland county.

Platteville Graduate

He next attended the state normal school at Platteville, from where he was graduated in June, 1900. After graduating from the normal, he served as principal for one year in a small high school at Boaz. After leaving that high school, he was teacher of science and mathematics for four years in the high school at Dodgeville.

From Dodgeville, Mr. Doudna went to Watertown to become principal of the high school, where he was in charge of the school for one year. He left the Watertown school at the end of one year's work and entered the high school at Richland Center where he served as its superintendent for eight years.

During the summers Mr. Doudna attended the summer school at the University of Wisconsin, graduating from a law and science course in the summer of 1914.

Taught at Eau Claire

He left Richland Center in 1916 to become director of the high school teachers' course in the Eau Claire State Normal which opened that year. He remained in that position for two years, coming from Eau Claire to Wisconsin Rapids to become superintendent of our city schools.

Mr. Doudna is the author of the book "Our Wisconsin" a school history of the state and used in all the schools throughout Wisconsin. He has also written a number of school articles for educational magazines on the subject of high School and Grade English.

Prominent In State

During the past year Mr. Doudna has been one of a state committee, organizing a course of study in high schools to establish a definite, simple and practical course as a basis for English work, which has already been adopted in this state, Illinois and New Jersey.

During his residence in Richland Center Mr. Doudna was chairman of the executive committee of Richland Center Municipal Theater, a public institution which opened March 10, 1915, and ever since its existence has been a paying investment. A full account of it is given in an article written by Walter A. Dyer, which appeared in the World's Work of 1916.

Head of City Superintendents

Mr. Doudna is president of the City Superintendents' Association of Wisconsin, vice-president of the State Teachers' Association of Wisconsin, a memebrs of the National Council of Teachers of English, a member of the Landmark Committee of the State Historical Society which puts up marks on historical sites throughout the state.

During the late war he fully proved himself as a one hundred per cent. American doing his best in every possible way to help win the cause. He was one of the four minute men, speaking throughout the state on the Liberty Loan campaigns.

Prominent In Lodges

He is an active member of the First Congregational Church of this citly. In lodges he belongs to the Masonic Order, the Elks, and is a member of the Rotary Club.

On December 21, 1903, Edgar George Doudna was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Parnell of Dubuque, Ia. They are the parents of two children, their son William, 17 years old, and their daughter Dorothy, five years of age.

Man Among Men

Wisconsin Rapids can consider herself fortunate in having a city superintendent of schools of the type of Mr. Doudna. Unlike many scholars and men in his profession Mr. Doudna is a man of genial nature, and of a most democratic turn of mind. In him is combined the fine qualities which a schoolmaster and leader should exemplify. In his frank way he has humanized the school system to a point which has brought admiration from the highest education authorities in the state. Because of his high principles in education and sound pedagogical policies, Mr. Doudna is held in the highest regard by the people of the educational profession. To have a man of Mr. Doudna's understanding and experience in a city, is rare good fortune to that city. It is therefore a source of great satisfaction to record the fact that the people of this city appreciate his work to the fullest extent.

Magna Charta Still Most Popular British Document

London—After 700 years, Magna Charta remains the most popular British manuscript. Last year 14,000 persons went to the British Museum to see it. Americans invariably ask to view the famous charter which insures Englishmen their rights, according to the museum custodians, but other foreigners take more interest in the Papal Bull which is displayed next to it.

Heavy green blinds are kept over the precious parchment to exclude the full light rays and thus prevent deterioration but are lifted to show the charter to admiring pilgrims.

Most persons are disappointed at [illegible] John's signature, according to an official at the museum, but they seem satisfied when they read the script that it was "given by our hand in the meadow which is called Renimede between Windlesor and Stanes, on the 15th day of June in the 17th year of our reign. Wisconsin Yachts Will Compete In Milwaukee Meet

Milwaukee, Wis.—Yachts from Oshkosh, Sheboygan, Madison, Manitowoc Neenah-Menasha and other cities adjacent to bodies of water will compete in the regatta of the International Power Boat union to be held in connection with the Neptune Carnival to be held here June 14, the closing day of the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

The Milwaukee Civic council under whose auspices the frolic is being staged announced that $1,000 has been set aside for prizes, the largest share of which will go to the regatta. Five purses, ranging from $200 to $1,000 for the sweepstakes have been put up for yacht racing prizes.

Under the auspices of the extension division, Milwaukee public schools, amateur schoolboy and swimming and aquatic championships of all kinds will be held. Sixty medals of gold, silver and bronze will be awarded winners.

Awards totaling several hundred dollars will be given in races for boats with detachable motors, but these have not been definitely decided upon officials stated.

All club officials are planning for plenty of excitement when Baby Gar, the fastest hydroplane in the world, said to be capable of making 80 miles per hour, races with a seaplane from the Great Lakes Naval training station and another plane from Milwaukee.

Outside of the sport events there are $200 in prizes for bathing girls of the state, who will pass in review on Juneau park beach and $100 in cups for the best decorated crafts in the Venetian night fete.

A grand stand, capable of seating 10,000 and one-half mile long, is being arranged for.
